THE Durban office of the State Veterinarian is continuing with its annual free rabies vaccination campaign in Durban, which started this week and ends on 29 July.

Joey Peens, Control Animal Health Technician, said their aim was to control the disease which has killed many animals and people over the years.

“The eThekweni area had 34 cases of rabies animals last year. For the first five months of this year there have been already 21 cases,” Peens said.

Dr Ayo Olowolagba, Deputy

Head of Communicable Diseases in the Municipality’s Health Unit, urged all animal owners who had not had their pets vaccinated to take advantage of the campaign.

“Pet owners must vaccinate their dogs and cats against rabies because there is no cure once a person or animal contracts this disease,” Olowolagba said.

He said it was crucial for anyone bitten by an unvaccinated animal to seek immediate treatment. Early treatment can prevent the disease taking hold, but involves a long and painful series of injections. There is no cure once the victim begins to show symptoms – usually within three to five days.

“Remember, prevention is better than cure,” Olowolagba said.

Below are details of where you can take your animal for a free vaccination. In the previous edition of this paper details for Phoenix and Newlands East were covered.
